

The objective of this course is to acquaint the student with how the U.S. Supreme Court has “thought” about some of the most important Civil Liberties issues that have arisen in America over time, primarily by examining how the Court has dealt with them through the process of constitutional adjudication — a process that has had both legal and political dimensions — and by considering some of the major doctrinal developments that have resulted.